RICHARD H. SYLVESTER, - - Editor

WASHINGTON, FEBRUARY 2, 1887.

Mr. Ingails, the Kansas Scuator, is represented as saying in a recent inter-view that "a Continental republic" is his dream of the future, and that he believes this to be "the settled convic-tion of the American people." "It is the manifest destiny," he continues-"the inevitable tendency of our politi-cal forces; it is their only safety." He then points out the wisdom of establishing relations of international friendship with our Canadian neigh-bors on the North, and our Spanish neighbors on the South, and of no permitting "the machinations of Great Britain to foment disturbances that will defer such alliance or render it impos

ment on the part of all who have care-fully considered the subject and noted the evangellzing influence that Repub-lican institutions, founded by the wisdom of the fathers, have already had in the dissemination of free principles and the development of self-governing commonwealths. The same influence in the course of generations may effect the incorporation of these commonwealths, one by one, with the parent government. The child is probably ow living who will see the beginning of the absorption, extending in each di-rection and resulting in the annexa-tion both of Mexico and Canada, or at least, their immediate contiguous ter

Anything in the nature of a forcing process to the effectuation of these re-sults is, however, not to be encouraged. The "Continental republic" of which the Kansas Senator dreams is only to be desired, if at all, when the interest and sympathles of our outlying neighbors have become so thoroughly Amer icanized that the lack of homogeneity of race shall no longer stand as a barrier in the way of a "more perfect union" under one Constitution.

To the end that this union may eventually become possible, Mr. Ingails suggests, as the most effective means, the establishment of closer relations with the various nations and peoples The chief purpose of the proposed Permanent Exposition is to bring us into nearer contact with their markets and thereby illustrate the mutual advantages to accrue from com-mercial alliances that have too long been neglected. There is nothing that tends so rapidly and surely towards making friends out of strangers as reciprocity of trade added to community of sentiment.

So far as our neighbors in the South are concerned, the problem will grad-ually work itself out. The Canadian question presents difficulties and threat ens complications that will demand the highest order of statesmanship to deal with successfully.

The Annexationists of the Dominion are few in number as compared with the large and heterogeneous popula-tion, unsuited by education, tradition or natural aptitude to be congenial or profitable partners with us. Even were accept American statehood, it will not be a consummation to be wished. At the risk of an embroliment with England it were unwise, and, excepting on the gravest provocation, indefensible. The time is not yet ripe for either Canadian annexation or conquest.

A government which is not in con dition to take care of its own family is certainly not in a proper condition to make additions to its family. So long as the coasts we already possess lie un-defended, what would be the advantage of acquiring more coast line? If we cannot defend New York and San Francisco against attack, how should we be able to hold Hallfax or Panama Nothing could be a source of greater weakness than to annex territory as defenseless as our own.

The dream of Mr. Ingalls is not a disordered fancy; it is a thoroughly logical conception, but the opportunity is not yet. The realization is a contingency dependent upon too many conditions to be hoped for or expected in the early future. Not until the United States, by a sagacious policy of naval reconstruction and coast defenses for protection against invasion—by com-mercial reforms and friendly international conventions for the creation of a atrong and enduring community of American sentiment—shall be enabled to take and maintain her own position as against all other powers, is it worth our while to more than dream of the coming Continental republic.

Jupon Reagan, who was elected United States Senator from Texas yesterday, is 60 years of age. He served four years in Congress before the war. was Postmaster General of the Southern Confederacy, and is now serving bis sixth term in the House slace the war. He is a man of indefatigable industry, an assiduous representative the interests of his constituents, a Senate. His election may be accepted as an unqualified indersement of his long contention for interstate commerce legislation. THE case of Samuel Groin, who in 1832 was reappointed to a Mississippi land office by President Jackson, after his rejection by the Senate, is quoted by the New York Herald this morning as having some analogous features to the case of Recorder Matthews. It has a certain analogy in this respect, that this helps Matthews any. It is true President Jackson, like President Cleveland, insisted upon his origina appointment, but President Jackson unlike President Cleveland, was no committed, either personally or by slatform, to the maintenance of the home-rule principle.

Affidavits accompany this sketch: Recently several Congressmen, with some special business to attend to, met at one of the totals on the Avenue. After the mest-ing they came down into the lobby and while engaged in a final fails, they noticed and those three reliance rates. one of those five-cent-aute patent weighing machines which decorate several of the hotel

"Why not?" asked Mr. Geddes "We cause they always know their Waite,"
"Be cause they always know their Waite,"
"Do they get weighed every day?" inquired General Warner of Ohio. "Ohi"
he continued, "I see; Justice always carries the scales in her hand," and he laughed at his own joke, but didn't tumble to Hemphills."

narked Mr. Barnes of Georgia. "Don't give it a weigh," whispered Mr.

After a little more of this scaly kind of wit, they moved over to the machine. "What does it cost?" inquired Mr. Hol-

"Five cents appear," said Governor Me-Creery. "You see, the hand on the dial won't more until the nickel is dropped into the box."
"Does each man have to put in a nickel!" questioned Mr. Holman.
"That's the weigh it is done," repiled the Governor.

"Gentlemen," continued Mr. Holman, after a few moment's reflection, 'economy is wealth. I have bit upon a plan of retrenchment and reform in this weighing trenchment and reform in this weighing business. One of you gentlemen, who has a nickel, will get on the scales and dropit in the box. That will set the machine going, and then we will all follow, each getting on the platform before his preducessor has left it, and thus keep that hand from getting back to where it has to be started again with a nickel. Do I hear an objection?" There below, now, they toward up for a There being mone, they tossed up for a right to put in the leading nickel, and Mr. Cannon of Hilteds fell a sacrifice. He came up like a little man, remarking: "This is the weigh I long have sought," started the hand around the dial, and before it could esume its normal condition, Mr. Cannon's nickel had weighed ten Congressmen, and when they left, it was still doing service for all the guests in the labby, who up to the time had not truly appreciated the worder ful economy of Congressmen.

In Behalf of the Signal Corps,

Entres Carrie: Saveral articles have appeared recently in the daily papers advo-cating the relection of the Signal Coops is cating the retention of the Signal Corps in the army, and giving as one of the reasons, that the men is a body desired to remain in their present status.

While I will not say that said articles were intended to midical the qualification on the question at team, still I shoutly maintain that they have acted in that direc-tion.

A large majority of the entitled man see the great advantages to be derived from the transfer as elvilians to the "Articularial Department," and are heartly by favor of the measure; and to support of this statement will say that a patition, signed by over two thirds of the men or duty at the central office, has been forwarded to Congress, praying for the clange.

MEN AND THINGS ABOUT TOWN.

The Attorney-General, besides being the fress and observance of social forms, car-ries out his ideas even in the matter of dress and observance of social forms, carries out his ideas even in the matter of lunch. Instead of going to a swell restaurant, several of these establishments being contiguous to his Department, the Hero of Hominy Hill brings his lunch every day in a small glided wicker basket. Recently, after a Cabinet meeting which lasted until a late bour in the afternoon, a visitor to the Department of Jostice caught the Attorney-General enjoying his simple meal. It was merely a shortened biscutt, the usual round shape made by good bonsewives, and having been buttered when hot, was very palatable. "It empoy a lunch like this," and the Attorney-General, "because it is light and does not spoil my appetite for dinner a few hours ident." The apartment in which the simple daily meal to partalent is probably the most sumptiously furnished of any used by a Cabinet minister of the present Administration, since Attorney-General Brewster, who was a connoissent, had filled this room with articles of vertus and contry decorations, carpiets and lang-

There is considerable talk at present regarding Assistant Secretary Fairchild being the probable successor of Secretary Maniega as the custodian of the Treasury portfolio. Like the Attorney-General, Mr. Fairchild does not believe in costly or luxurious lunches, but contents himself with plain fare and plenty of good exercise. Malaga grapes are the principal feature of plain fare and plenty of good exercise. Malaga grapes are the principal leature of Mr. Fairchind's hunch, together with a glass of milk from the farm of a constituent of Senator Gorman and a generous since of real foston Brown Bread. As seen as he can catch up with the mal accuminated on his deal, the Assistant Secretary has a small table moved over near the open grade wood fire and there he edges; his mid-lay med. Horselack exercise in the mornings before coming to the Department and in the afternoons when the cares of the day are over kerja Mr. Fairchild in such good health that he has never yet complained of Washington maintia.

Few men in the House of Represent lives command more attention than J. Bandolph Tucker of Virginia. He is per Randolph Tucker of Virginia. He is perhais the most positive and emphatic member of that body. He tests public questions by a standard which is to his mind thrallible, and his position is always determined by his devotion to principles of government and views of the Constitution, the soundness of which he believes to be beyond question. This positiveness of convertence this ready and absolute decision, this concistent and dauntless defense of his opinions on all subjects affords on strange a contrast to the manner of most of his associates that many of his admirers seek to had an explanation. To these it will be of interest to know that a relative of Mr. Tucker's declares that throughout he history of this Government the men from whom he is directly descended have addicted to precisely the sun views and the contrast of the family of the first production and a distinguished lawyer.
